TULE ELK NATURAL RESERVE

GUIDED TOUR AT THE TULE ELK RESERVE

Tule Elk State Natural Reserve protects a small herd of tule elk, once in danger of extinction. We'll be joined by a park ranger as we set out to view these amazing animals in this natural habitat. Elk from the reserve have been successfully transplanted to other areas in California, and today nearly 4000 tule elk are again free roaming the foothills and grasslands of California. The elk are most active from late summer through early autumn. Visitors are encouraged to bring binoculars for better viewing.
